

There is an old quote attributed to both Plato and the Hopi Native Americans saying, "Those who tell the stories rule the world." Storytelling is an important aspect of the many Native American tribes and nations. In the same way, storytelling also is a large part of the South. Living in Tuscaloosa, there is a rich history and when we only speak of the University of Alabama, we're telling part of the story of this amazing city. With this medal, ribbon, etc. we want to pay homage to the namesake of Tuscaloosa and the Muskogean culture in which Chief Tuskaloosa lived and ruled.

Hopefully, this attempt will tell another aspect of the story Tuscaloosa is currently telling and will continue to tell.

We hope that you like it!